Top Dog Stories of 2012

If you're reading this, then you're probably aware: Dogs rule. This year, a handful of canines rose above the rest, making headlines for their actions — whether facing imminent danger to save lives, enduring unimaginable physical hardships, or simply making us laugh.

A look at the year's most newsworthy dogs:

After the unimaginable events that befell Newtown, Conn., on Dec. 14 that left 27 people, including 20 children, dead at the hands of suspected gunman Adam Lanza, a team of golden retrievers was deployed from Chicago to the picturesque town. About 10 specially trained dogs, including Chewie, Ruthie, and Luther, made the 800-mile journey to sit with children and adults during masses and funerals. "Dogs are nonjudgmental. They are loving. They are accepting of anyone," says one handler. "It creates the atmosphere for people to share." The Chicago comfort dogs are notable not only for this caring venture but also for helping those who suffered through Hurricane Sandy and the tornado that hit Joplin, Mo., in 2011.

Message From the New President

Happy New Year, everyone!

May 2013 be a year of many blessings and triumphs for all of us!

Our heartfelt thanks go to Lynne and Ted Aung-Levin for opening their doors in gracious hospitality for our annual Christmas party.

As we begin a new year of activities, our first major focus is, of course, on our shows slated for Friday, February 22nd, at the Del Mar Fairgrounds. Judges for the events: AM show-Marsha Hall Brown; Conformation; Janice Pardue; Sweeps PM show, Sue Goldberg.

Our January 9th, Board and General Meetings will deal with some of the planning details. A Show Committee meeting is scheduled for January 23rd, starting at 7pm, at the home of Sherry and Robert Rez, 2355 Paseo Dorado, La Jolla, CA 92037.

Also on the agenda will be setting up the Rec. Center Council representatives for the year. Looking forward, the St. Patrick's Day Parade is on Saturday, March 16th, the day before St. Patrick's Day, this year. So start thinking about green costumes for our party-going Irish!

Business starts promptly at 7:00 PM. Everyone is welcome to attend and participate. So we are really "hitting the ground running!"

Top Dog Stories of 2012

The puppies that kept a lost boy warm

This year, dogs made headlines for offering emotional support and also physical aid, in particular to a young boy who got lost in the woods. Kyle Camp, a 10-year-old with Down Syndrome, went missing on Oct. 16. After his parents searched for him for two hours to no avail, they called the police. A determined team of about 150 volunteers and police officers searched the forested area around the Camps' house all night long. A state trooper helicopter even scanned the area from above. The next morning, 18 hours after the boy went missing, two searchers followed the Camp family dog, which had caught a scent, along a creek in thick brush. A half mile from his home, the dog located Kyle huddled with four of his family's puppies. Kyle was wet and without shoes, but he was safe, and officials say they believe the four puppies kept him warm through the cold, fall night.

The hero dog that lost its snout saving two girls

One dog's heroism so disfigured her sweet little face that her photo is often preceded by a warning. This canine's story started with a motorcycle careening through the streets of Zamboanga City, Philippines, earlier this year. Young cousins Dina Bunggal, 11, and Princess Diansing, 3, stepped unknowingly into its path. A mutt named Kabang came out of nowhere and jumped in front of the motorbike, stopping it in its tracks, and saving the little girls from serious injury. The driver and the girls emerged with superficial wounds, but Kabang wasn't so lucky. Her head landed on the motorcycle's front wheel and as the wheel rolled forward, Kabang's upper snout was ripped right off. Her story quickly went viral and when local doctors could do no more to help her, specialty surgeons from the University of California, Davis, flew Kabang to their facilities, where she'll endure six to eight weeks of treatment to repair her face. The cost of her surgeries, which could top $20,000, will be covered by her many supporters who have started an online fundraising campaign.

The dog stranded and rescued at 14,000 feet

In August, a couple hiking in the Rocky Mountains of Colorado stumbled across a German Shepherd whimpering and tucked into rocks along a trail near the top of Mount Bierstadt. Unable to move the injured pup on their own, the couple patched the dog up and left it with provisions before returning to ground level, where they created a Facebook page and went on web chat rooms to ask for help. Soon enough a group of volunteers returned to the mountain. When one set couldn't locate her, another tried again the next day. Amid a snow storm at the top of the mountain they found the shivering and battered dog. Nine hours after setting off on their mission, the rescuers delivered the abandoned pup safely to the vet. The volunteers said after all she'd been through, the dog was surely "the miracle dog of the century."

The stray dog that finished a 1,100-mile race across China

During an arduous 1,100-mile, 24-day biking race across mountainous China, a diminutive stray dog latched onto the group of athletes after they offered her a chicken leg. But after three days of loyally running alongside the speeding cyclists, the mutt, who they called Xiao Sa, or Little Sa, was accepted as an official part of the team. "I think we have definitely moved beyond food," said one cyclist remarking on the dog's curious motivation. While the small white-and-tan dog did most of the running, at times, when the athletes had to trek back down the mountains, at speeds that would surely leave their new little friend in the dust, she was hoisted up into a makeshift box on the back of a bike. The dog's persistence became the group's motivation as they tried to complete the task themselves. "She injected power unto us," said one cyclist. Upon finishing, Xiao Sa was taken to a vet and declared healthy. She was later adopted by one of the cyclists, which, really, is the least the humans could do.

The dog that saved its own life by calling the police

We've often heard the tale of the puppy that proves its "man's best friend" status by saving its owner's life. But this year, there was George, a 2-year-old basset hound in West Yorkshire, England, who reworked the well-worn script a bit, literally calling for help to save himself. Home alone, George had knocked the phone to the floor and was strangling himself with the handset's cord when he apparently dialed 999 — England's 911 equivalent — in a panic. The operator heard only frantic gasps and, assuming someone was desperately sick or reeling from an attack, sent police to the house. The dog was found and rescued from the cord. "Incredibly, you could see where his paw print was on the phone," said the neighbor, "he literally saved his own life."

Top Dog Stories of 2012

Monumental Status

For the first time in the history of the United States military that an animal, the dog, has been elevated to National Monument status by U.S. Congressional Law. To honor this historic monument, a patriotic float honoring the brave canine members and their handlers for their loyal service and heroism will appear courtesy of Natural Balance in the Rose Parade.

Laws for Paws

In the first of its kind ever in the history of the United States, Massachusetts passed a law keeping animals safe from abusive owners through a domestic violence restraining order. A 6-year-old dog named Panzer serves as inspiration for this landmark law.

Nose Cells Enable Dogs to Walk

By injecting dogs with cells lining their noses, scientists in England have given some paralyzed dogs the gift of walking. The study is the first to test the transplant in “real-life” injuries rather than laboratory animals. 🍀

Looking paw-ward to a stellar 2013 with the latest and greatest in the dog world along with plenty of dog-friendly travels, health and wellness.

Surprisingly, all these girls made Santa's Nice List.

On a personal note, some of you know that I've been convalescing during December from a back injury. It leads me to comment once again on the comfort of having my redheads nearby in times of stress and pain. We've all experienced that blessing at one time or another in our lives, I know.

See you at the January 9th meeting! Irish luck to you all...
