IRELAND HAS MORE THAN GREAT DOGS*Native Species Diversity

According to Ireland's National Parks and Wildlife Service, 26 terrestrial mammals are native to Ireland. Only animals that were present on the island or naturalized prior to the year 1500 are considered native. These animals make up only 13 percent of the mammals found elsewhere on the European continent. This lack of animal diversity began when sea levels rose at the end of the last Ice Age and Ireland became an island, preventing land or freshwater migration there after the thaw. Only birds and sea creatures were able to migrate to the island, and their consistency matches that of those in the rest of Europe.

Indigenous Animals

Animals indigenous to Ireland include the pygmy shrew, red squirrel, pine martin, red deer, Irish grey partridge, wood mouse and Irish hare, according to Discovery News. In addition, the badger, hedgehog, rabbit, red fox, Irish stoat, otter and ten species of bats are indigenous to the Emerald Isle, according to Ireland's NPWS. While the famous legend of Saint Patrick describes how he drove all of the snakes out of Ireland, this is more than an allegorical tale; it's grounded in reality. Snakes are not native to Ireland. In fact, Ireland is home to only one type of terrestrial native reptile, the viviparous lizard, which gives birth to live young like mammals.

Other Wildlife

Among the animals native to Ireland are three native species of amphibians, those being the common frog, the common newt and the Natterjack toad. The Birdlife International Avibase says 470 bird species live on the island. Two of these avian species have been introduced and the rest may not live on the island year-round due to migratory patterns. While the surrounding sea is rich in marine life, including dolphins, whales, turtles and sharks, freshwater native fish are limited to pike, perch, bream and rudd, according to the U.S. Department of Energy's Ask a Scientist! website. Trout and salmon regularly come to spawn in the streams of Ireland.

Threatened Species

Some animals that humans have introduced to Ireland's ecosystem have had harmful effects on the native species. Such unwanted species include the grey squirrel, the bank vole and the greater white-toothed shrew, according to a study published in the June 2012 issue of "Biological Invasions." These introduced species threaten the native red squirrel, the pygmy shrew and the wood mouse. Other native species under threat include the Irish hare and the red deer.

Extinct Species

Of Ireland's indigenous animals, those currently extinct include the great Irish elk, the grey wolf and the great auk, according to the Authentic Ireland website. All three were hunted to extinction by humans. The previously regionally extinct golden eagle, white-tailed eagle and red kite are being successfully reintroduced into the country, according to the Golden Eagle Trust.

GCH CH MACH ROSETTE MARDI GRAS BN RN JH
MXB MJS XF T2B VC

I'm very proud to announce that my Mardi completed her MACH over Labor Day weekend. I was starting to wonder if we would ever get that very elusive 20th double Q!! But, she finally pulled it off in less than ideal conditions – that sweltering heat we had at the beginning of Sept. In addition, Mardi is the first Irish Setter Grand Champion to earn the MACH title. Go Mardi!!

Thanks!!

Cathy

CH OTCH MACH Frankie

It is my honor to introduce Frankie the Irish Setter. A couple of weeks ago Frankie made history when she earned her MACH title. She became the first Irish Setter to earn the titles of Breed Champion, Obedience Champion and Agility Champion.

In all of AKC there are fewer than 50 dogs in all breeds that have accomplished this feat. So Frankie has indeed joined a very elite group of dogs.

Just to put this accomplishment in prospective, there are only 30 total OTCH Irish Setters and 5 of them are Ann's.

So please join me in celebrating the history making accomplishment of Frankie, and her amazing human team of Ann Alves and Kim Berkley. Frankie is now officially CH OTCH MACH Shine-On Polka Dots & Moonbeams UDX OM1 MXB MJB.

Ann Alves
