A GROUP OF 16

They will soon need a basket each – but in the meantime this record litter of Irish setter puppies can still enjoy a snuggle together.

Owner Judi Frampton knew their mother Amelia was expecting a large brood but was astonished to find there were 16, equaling the record Irish setter litter registered with the Kennel Club.

Amelia, four, gave birth to the puppies by caesarean at Seadown Veterinary Group's hospital in Hythe, Southampton. Unfortunately one of the pups was so small it did not survive.

Miss Frampton, from North Baddesley near Southampton, said: 'Louisa and all the nurses at Seadown were amazing. They all mucked in and went the extra mile.'

Her huge litter, worth around £1,000 each, still fall far short of the world record for a dog. That was set by Tia, a Neopolitan mastiff from Cambridgeshire, who gave birth to 24 pups in 2004.

RELATIVE SEEN IN SUSSEX, ENGLAND

Considered an alert dog and a protector of the family, the English setter is quite friendly, gentle and mild-mannered, but needs regular interaction with people and brisk daily walks.

English Setter at a glance:

The English setter is one of the oldest gun dog breeds, with a history that traces back to the 14th century. Among its forebears are the Spanish pointer, French pointer and a variety of spaniels.

The dog is a beautiful, elegant, slim, white setter with blue, lemon, orange or brown speckling. Some dogs may be tricolored: blue, white and brown.

The hair is long, flat, silky and a little wavy. The eyes are large and hazel, the nose is dark, and the moderately long ears hang downward. The ears, tail, legs and underside are all heavily feathered.

A fully-grown male English setter stands 25 to 27 inches tall and weighs 65 to 80 pounds (29 to 36 kilograms). Females stand 23 to 25 inches tall and weigh between 45 and 75 pounds (20 to 25 kilograms).

The average life span of an English setter is 12 years, although some have been known to live well into their teens.

Personality:

The English setter is a gentle, friendly, placid dog that is especially good with children. He is mild-mannered and sensitive and loves to both give and receive affection. These dogs are known to be alert and protective of their families and territories, but will calm down quickly when told to.

English setters are very sociable dogs. They enjoy being with both people and other dogs.

These dogs are known to enjoy roaming, digging and jumping. They are very active as puppies but are known to mellow out considerably when they fully mature.
